Society Welcomes the Close of the Gay

The President and Mrs. Cleveland's Public Reception-Personal Notes.

Society has turned its attention today to much more serious matters than have been engaging its mind and strength every hour of the twenty-four since New Year morning. The church goers were just as prompt in answering in person the call of the church bells this morning as they have been in attending the demands of fashion and the gay world lately. At St. Matthew's there were scores of fashionable heads bent to receive the penitential ashes and its suggestions of mortality, as there were at all the other Catholic churches of the District, At St. John's the early services attracted crowds of worshipers who were only yesterday the bright particular stars of the social firmament, and will be again when the gay world resumes its sway. After today entertainments will go on with almost the usual swing, except that dancing will form no part in the hospitality of those who conform to what is considered the best style. Some follow this rule from purely religious motives, and others be-cause of a desire for rest from these pleasures and the necessity to give more time for intellectual activity and relaxation of a A good many are packing their trunks

By the time the front door was reached the procession was narrowed down to couples, and as it passed the corridor it stretched out into single file. It is safe to assume that nobody was quite satisfied with the quick step necessary in moving the crowd through the blue room, and more heads were turned backward than front face when the green room was reached. For the first hour the gest room was open and the growd enjoyed east room was open and the crowd enjoyed staying there or failing in the line and soing through again, but after 9 o'clock it was not fair to the throng outside the mansion to allow the early comers too many privileges. Its most formidable opponent is Assistant Secretary Doe, who is of opin-ion that the results would by no means justify the distraction of army officers from more legitimate duties as commanders of troops. He does not agree with the theory that the detail will sufficiently benefit the young men to warrant taking officers from their companies. He believes that there are other equally good methods of estab-lishing discipline among students. The Washington High School made no application for the detail of an army officer as in-structor of military science and tactics and is apparently satisfied with the present system of instruction under Maj. The manner in which people go apstairs is productive of many aliments, and a care Notice how much of the "dead lift" there is about it; the feet and legs are made to act as levers, not only to force the weight of the body up, but also the additional weight, which is the result of inertia. Instead of raising the chest and animating the body to lift its own weight, we bend the body nearly double, cramping the organs, hindering free circulation and consequently easy preathing. Panting for breath, we reach the top, sent! Going upstairs is easy and healthful when properly done. We will not say that it will not quicken the pulse, for in this, as in any other exercise, the rapidity and force of muscular action determine the rate with which the blood is forced to and from the
